Studying at Birkbeck

- ▶ Each module has a handbook, with detailed description of contact points, aims and objectives, learning outcomes, syllabus, and assessment requirements
- ▶ Most modules will be taught by pre-recorded lectures combined with in-person seminar or tutorial (for quantitative modules)
- ▶ You will need to finish the readings before you come to in-person sessions and actively engage in class discussions and activities
- ▶ Student will have the chance to provide constructive feedback (course representatives and module evaluation)

Moodle: Birkbeck's Virtual Learning Platform

- ▶ College services and and/or program information, see Orientation-Surviving and Thriving at Birkbeck
- ▶ Course materials, including module handbooks, lecture recordings, readings and handouts
- ▶ Dissertation module, where you can find information about Dissertation Guidance and workshop materials

Learning outside classrooms: Research centres and institutes

RESEARCH CENTRES AND INSTITUTES

Our interdisciplinary centres and institutes encourage collaboration within and across Birkbeck's schools and departments, by bringing together researchers from different subjects and disciplines. They are more formal than our academic research networks, groups and societies, but there are many areas of overlap and collaboration between them.

Our staff regularly feature in the media. Find out more about their research through our 'Birkbeck in the media' summary page.
